Visual Education For Disabled Vets

Chicago, Jan. 12.—Disabled world war soldiers, taking courses of education from the government can learn certain trades and industrial work throughout the visual educational system recently instituted by the government in one-fifth of the time they would require through lectures and the study system, according to results of experiments made here by the Society of Visual Education.

"There are various reasons for this condition," said Sumner Calvert, superintendent of the society here. "The chief factor in making this rapid education possible is the fact that through the pictures the pupil is enabled to gain what might be called practical experience as well as theory for the subject under study is gone through with in far more elaborate detail than text books supply and the eye can gather and record it on the mind by action of the subject far faster than the mind can absorb and record it through study."

"Of course, this study is the secondary feature of the course that puts the finishing touch to the pupil, but he usually knows what he is reading about and can avoid concentrated effort if he has taken the visual system first."

The government has made educational films dealing with mechanical arts, the machine shop, dairy and light farm work, civics and what taxes are far in relation to the government, bee culture, and geography and geology.

The government however, is particularly in case a film is being made with the subject of dairying, a dairy with the very latest equipment is picked out. The picture machine and operator is transported to this dairy but accompanying him is a professor from a leading university, who is considered to have knowledge that is the very last word on the subject of cows, milk, butterfat and dairying in general. Also a practical dairyman who stands at the very top of his profession in the dairy. Then there is the general film manager. These three, decide upon the manner in which the picture is to be made to bring forth the best results from the students viewpoint. Every detail of dairying is shown with close ups on all features that require close study when in text books. Time in exposure is considered for in each showing of the films and a practical dairyman instructs the pupils in the finer details. Health and hygiene are included in all pictures.

The same system of taking the pictures is applied to every film. In the machine shop pictures, for example an expert machinist and a professor in mechanical engineering both oversee the picture filmed and watch not only for detail that the student needs but for the details that the students should be cautioned to avoid.

ARROGANCE OF LANDLORDS IN THE LOCKWOOD HEARING

New York, Jan. 11.—Tenants and makers of electric light bulbs told their troubles to the Lockwood legislative committee today. The tenants complained against high rents and arrogance of landlords, and criticized the courts for the way rent cases are handled. The bulb manufacturers gave additional testimony that the General Electric Company has a grip on their business, and compels them to limit production.

After hearing testimony that thousands of Washington Heights tenants had vainly sought to get back money paid for jury fees following their decision to jump the cases against rent advances and let one decision stand for the group, the committee decided to subpoena three judges in the seventh district municipal court—John R. Davies, Samson Friedlander and S. Clinton Crane.

"Try and get it," was the answer the tenants said they received on asking return of these payments.

John P. Burns, clerk of the court, testified $1,500,000 had been impounded in the seventh district pending decisions in rent cases. Ten landlords, he said, were prosecuting most of the 5,000 cases now in the Washington Heights court. The witness said Commissioner of Accounts Hirschfeld instructed him not to return jury fees when tenants bunched their cases.

"I will show those people who complain here," he declared. Committee counsel warned him to quit "bullying" and tenants hissed him when he left the room.

Centerbrook.—It is announced from the office of the state police that the state police barracks which have been established at Centerbrook, in Middlesex county, will be in charge of Oliver Morris Sterling.

CONTRADICTORY TESTIMONY AT THE WATSON HEARING

Washington, Jan. 11.—Testimony contradicting that of former service men was given today by army officers before a senate committee. Investigators charged that American soldiers had been hanged without trial in France. Colonel Charles J. Symonds of Camp Sherman thirty-six years in the army who was in command at Glueville, at which place soldiers had told of hearing reports of numerous executions, decided only one man was hanged there and that the hanging by his order was secret.

The fact of the execution was made public later, the colonel explaining that the murder for which the soldier was put to death had not been committed in his area, and he did not want a big crowd on hand to witness it. The picture of a gallows, supposed to be at Glueville, which had been filed with the committee by a former soldier, was identified by Colonel Symonds as the structure built there, "on one closely resembling it."

Captain Joseph D. Maho, now stationed at Camp Benning, Ga., declared there was not a word of truth in the charges by Harry W. Segal, a soldier, that he, Maho, had taken part in the unlawful execution of two negro soldiers. Other witnesses said they never had heard of a lynching in the Sixteenth infantry, as witnesses appearing heretofore before the committee had asserted.

The hearing went over until tomorrow when other army officers will be examined.

AUTOMATIC TRAIN CONTROL
DEVICES FOR RAILROADS

Washington, Jan. 11.—Forty-mile of the larger railroads of the United States serving practically all sections of the country were ordered by the interstate commerce commission today to show cause on or before March 15, next, why they should not be required to install complete systems of automatic train control devices on their lines. The commission included with the order, that it reserve the right to order the installation of such devices on the railroads deemed to be necessary by July 1, next, which will be adopted by the commission. The order today caused a revival.

Train control devices, the commission said, have long passed beyond the period of experimentation necessary to demonstrate their efficiency and exhaustive tests of their operation have been made under the commission's observations on a number of lines. The roads made subject to the installation requirement today, the commission said, are those on which traffic conditions and other considerations make such safeguards most desirable. The action is taken under a section of the interstate commerce act passed in 1906 which gives the commission authority to prescribe the train control systems if these are found to be necessary after an investigation.
